V. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions (2points)

Advertising has come into existence since the beginning of period when people did not use the barter system, but bought and sold. Before the inventions of newspapers, radio and television, merchants and salesmen used to shout or sing about things that they were selling. Those who were hired to advertise things like that were called criers. They even used musical instruments when crying about their wares. Today, some vendors still do so.

Nowadays, newspapers and magazines are full of advertisements which look attractive and sound interesting. There is no channel on TV or on the radio without advertisements. Along the streets posters are installed for advertising with many eye – catching pictures. In the store windows, goods of all kinds are displayed and available for every taste. Computers have become the most modern device for advertising. Customers even can buy thing using the Internet.
